

ABSTRACT

A method and system for finishing windows uses a shim plate. The shim plate is fastened to a framing member and extends between the framing member and the periphery of the framed insert. Foaming material is expanded between the sill plate and the framing member to support the shim plate relative to the framing member. Finishing material may be placed against the shim plate and fastened in place to finish the window opening.